

Join CKHA's newly established Rural Health Advisory Committee (RHAC)

The RHAC serves as a mechanism for recognition and discussion of rural health issues and opportunities at Chatham-Kent Health Alliance. It's also a two-way communication forum between the rural communities served by CKHA and the hospitals that form the Alliance.

To support this newly established advisory committee, CKHA is currently looking for five (5) community representatives from the following geographic areas: East Kent, North Kent, South Kent, Wallaceburg and West Kent. Interested applicants must reflect their ability to meet the RHAC's requirements, such as demonstrating an interest in the hospital and healthcare and an ability to connect with the community about local and rural healthcare issues.

Community members must apply and if selected, participate in an interview process. Successful candidates will also have to comply with CKHA's standard volunteer protocols.
